CHALLENGES FACED

Need to manage and keep track of content created and distributed to different schools for teachers training in partner school based on their board required a lot of time and personnel to manage such tasks. There was no way to track if the teacher actually engaged with the content and if they did, to what extent.

KKEL had no software to conduct learning through online classrooms and let students learn at their own pace through quiz, video, ebooks, etc.

With such a complex school structure and over 100 K students, it became extremely difficult and costly to distribute course content to each student, more so tracking how well the student interacted with content was just not possible.

KKEL needed a solution that can communicate with their existing ERP to remove any redundancy of data entry.

With so much content being created, they needed a content approval mechanism.

KKEL faced with the problem of content being stolen by internal staff and plagiarized by simply allowing members to access the raw documents without any security.

Kangaroo Kids, that started with only 13 children over 2 decades ago in one preschool, has now spread its wings across four countries. With its pioneering teaching process, both creative and practical, it offers the best of both worlds.
